

Bryan Kortcamp

Welcome to Emergency Management at The Master's University. My name is Bryan Kortcamp, and I have had the privilege of serving the TMU community since 2010 in a variety of public safety and leadership roles. Today, as Director of Emergency Management, I am honored to lead our university's efforts to prepare for, respond to, and recover from emergencies and disasters while supporting the mission and values that make The Master's University unique.

My approach to emergency management is built on a simple but essential philosophy: Plan • Train • Respond. Effective emergency management begins long before a crisis occurs. Through comprehensive planning, realistic training, strong partnerships, and continuous improvement, we seek to cultivate a resilient campus community that is prepared to face any challenge with confidence, competence, and compassion.

Our vision for Emergency Management at The Master's University is to foster a culture of preparedness that protects life, preserves our educational mission, and equips our students, faculty, staff, and surrounding community to effectively respond to and recover from emergencies. Guided by our commitment to Christ-centered service and servant leadership, we strive to build a program that reflects excellence, stewardship, and resilience. As Proverbs 16:9 reminds us, "The heart of man plans his way, but the Lord establishes his steps." This verse serves as a foundational principle for our department, reminding us that while we diligently plan, train, and prepare, we ultimately place our trust in God's sovereign guidance and provision.

Whether you are a student, parent, employee, or community partner, I invite you to explore the resources available on this site and join us in our shared responsibility to ensure that The Master's University remains a safe, prepared, and resilient community.
